Dublin, October 11.

His Grace John Duke of Bedford, Lord Lieutent General and General Governor of Ireland, his Speech to both Houſes of Parliament.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

IT is with great Satisfaction I obey His Majeſty's Commands to meet you here in Parliament, being aſſured, from your former Conduct, that your Deliberations will be directed to promote the Honour of His Majeſty's Government, and the Safety and Proſperity of this Kingdom.

The preſent critical Juncture of Affairs, occaſioned by the War in which His Majeſty has been neceſſarily engaged, to defend the Rights of His Crown, and protect the Commerce of His Subjects; and the unnatural Conjunction of thoſe Powers with whom He is to contend, require your moſt ſerious Attention, in order to preſerve Peace at Home, and to be prepared, if any Inſult ſhould be attempted on this Kingdom.

The full Enjoyment we have had of our religious and civil Rights and Liberties ſince the Acceſſion of His Majeſty's moſt Illuſtrious Houſe, and the paternal Care and Tenderneſs invariably ſhewn by His Majeſty to His good Subjects of this Kingdom, muſt have made the deepeſt Impreſſion on your Minds, and convinced you how nearly we are intereſted in preventing whatever may tend to deprive us of thoſe Bleſſings.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

Heavy as the Expence of this War has been, I have nothing, in Command from His Majeſty, to aſk, but the uſual Supplies, and for that Purpoſe I have ordered the proper Officers to prepare the ſeveral Accounts and Eſtimates to be laid before you.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

You are not now to be informed of His Majeſty's Readineſs to conſent to ſuch Laws as as may conduce to the Welfare of this Kingdom; You will conſider the State of the Charter-Schools, and what farther Steps may be taken to ſtrengthen the Proteſtant Intereſt, and to promote the Linen Manufacture, which muſt be conſidered as the Staple of this Kingdom: It were alſo to be wiſhed, that ſome Method might be found out, to prevent the Calamities which are the neceſſary Conſequences of a Want of Corn in Ireland, which have been, in Part felt this laſt Year, and to which this Country has been too often expoſed.

My beſt Endeavours ſhall concur with you in every Thing that may advance the real Intereſt of this Kingdom.

Whitehall, October 18.

The King has been pleaſed to order Letters Patent to be paſſed and iſſued under the Great Seal of the Kingdom of Ireland, for the Promotion of John Cradock, Doctor in Divinity, to the Biſhoprick of Kilmore in the ſaid Kingdom, void by the Death of the Right Reverend Father in God Dr. John Storey, late Biſhop thereof.

Whitehall, October 11, 1757.
